

The Tide has changed

I'd already seen us with children on our knees
Happily bright, a wonderful sight
But now the tide has changed and our dreams might fade away
We drifted apart
I broke your heart
If only I knew how to comfort you

In this dark winter the lights shine so christmas-bright

It hurts to see your eyes full of love for me
And moaning with grief
Spelling the thief
Of your lover's heart
But darling, don't you see
That love does not fade
But don't hesitate
When life calls your name
You have to proof your heart

In this dark winter the lights will guide your way

And now the tide has changed and I just took your place
Oh what a grief
To see you leave

In this dark winter the lights will guide us home...
